Why did you choose interior design as a profession? Interior design is, in fact, my second profession, and in many ways, it actually feels like the path I was always meant to follow. Coming from a highly technical industry, I felt drawn to the creative side of life. Design was a passion that continuously beckoned me, and after the success of my first project, I knew I had found my true purpose. It became clear that interior design was not just a career choice, but part of my destiny.

What is your favourite interior design trend at the moment? At the moment, my favourite interior design trend is monochromatic Neoclassical design. I appreciate its timeless elegance, sophistication and the way it creates a clean yet bold statement within a space.

What's the one rule that you would never break when it comes to interior design? One rule I would never compromise on is the proper use of natural light. Natural light has the power to transform a space, making it feel warm, inviting and alive. I always aim to maximise it wherever possible.

What do you do to relax after a long day? I enjoy cooking with my children, who share my love for the kitchen. It's such a special and relaxing bonding experience that allows us to connect, unwind and create memories together.

What are you looking forward to in terms of the future of interior design? I'm excited to see the new trends and fresh perspectives the next generation of designers will bring. I'm also looking forward to how advancing technology will continue to shape smarter, more efficient and beautifully designed homes.
